

BECO MANAGEMENT NAMED TOP-10 BEST PLACE TO WORK BY THE WASHINGTON POST

Recognized for Creating Extraordinary Workplace Experiences for Its Customers and Employees

ROCKVILLE, Md. (June 19, 2015) – BECO Management, Inc., a premier commercial real estate investment, development and management company serving the greater Washington, D.C., Baltimore, Charlotte and Chicago markets, announced today The Washington Post named it among the top-10 best places to work among companies with less than 100 employees in Metropolitan D.C. BECO has been named a best place to work in the region by the Washington Business Journal twice in the last decade. This year’s award pays recognition to a core principle that has become a hallmark of the company’s success since its founding – to make life better at work for both its customers and its employees.

“BECO was founded on the idea that the workplace environment should be extraordinary,” said Jeffrey Cohen, president and CEO, BECO Management. “For us, workspace is not about the space, it’s about what happens inside and around it. It’s about more than just designing physical environments that represent collaboration, inspiration and growth; it’s about creating experiences that foster these outcomes for our customers and our employees. It’s why our focus is always about the experience, how we execute the extraordinary and where we can enhance the environment from the inside out. To be recognized for this effort among our peers is a huge honor, and I applaud the entire BECO Management team for making our workplace environment a standard of excellence.”

The criteria for the award from The Washington Post includes factors like leadership ability, work-life balance, and pay and benefit practices based on a survey conducted by research firm Workplace Dynamics to poll employees.

“While BECO has grown significantly over the years, it has never outgrown the ideals that make it a special place to work and I am very proud to be a part of it,” said Kris Broder, vice president for brand and workplace experience, BECO Management. “Every day, each one of us comes focused on making life better at work for our customers and colleagues. That’s our personality, it’s how we shine and it communicates something larger about our values and our value. It’s what our credo is all about and how we better connect with our customers and each other.”
